Examining the U.S. and China Business Landscape

The relationship between the United States and China – the world's largest developed country and the largest developing country – naturally draws the most attention among all bilateral relations. As a prominent business leader running a global business and actively involved in shaping U.S. foreign policies, Mr. John Chen will discuss the current landscape of the multifaceted business relationship between these two nations. Mr. Chen will share his views on the impact on Corporate America in the long run.
